

Idaho Diversity Network Regional Mentoring Conference

Collective Mentoring for Diverse Populations:
Reflections, Research, & Strategies

Monday, April 27th, 2020
University of Idaho-
Bruce Pitman Center

Overview: The Idaho Diversity Network will be holding a 1-day conference on Monday, April 27th, 2020 which will focus on providing professional development for faculty and students on effective strategies for mentoring students from under-represented groups in science, technology, engineering and mathematics (STEM) and related fields.

Agenda: Topics will include discussion on importance of establishing a culture of mentorship, understanding implicit bias, and the science behind effective mentoring strategies. We will also discuss mentoring structures and hear from faculty, administrators, and students from the region regarding current mentoring practices and strategies for success.

Who should attend: Faculty and administrators who mentor undergraduate or graduate students are encouraged to apply. There will also be sessions geared for students engaged in peer-mentoring.

To Register: Deadline for student and faculty registration is Friday, April 17th, 2020. To register visit: <http://idnregional.eventbrite.com/>
